3.0 What to expect when you are invited to an interview/assessment

Whether you are attending an interview in person or having an interview virtually, you can be assured that all interview panels will be made up of a diverse panel. All interviewers are fully trained in unconscious bias. This means that those on the panel will be a mixture of genders and ethnicities and have been trained to be consciously aware of any unconscious biases they could have, thus ensuring a fair and equitable process is followed throughout every stage of the process. These panel members were also responsible for shortlisting you to attend the interview.

4.0 Shortlisting

Anonymised applications are utilised for all vacancies at any pay grade which means recruiting managers only see applications as a number, not by personal details. This allows managers to focus only on the content of application forms and enables a truly unbiased approach, as no opinion is based on gender, ethnicity etc.

5.0 Interviews

Only once the manager has shortlisted the application will the personal details be made available and visible to them.

Questions asked at interview are designed jointly by the managers and HR. These can be competency based, therefore we suggest that you have some scenario-based answers ready in preparation. They will require you to give examples of where you have demonstrated the specific skill being measured as part of the interview.

The manager may ask for an example, what you did, how it was measured and what you may have done differently, with hindsight. These questions are designed to really understand you and how you deal with real life scenarios.

Therefore, be thorough and detail everything you did specifically:

- All questions will be relevant to the job and be based on the job description and person specification so ensure you familiarise yourself with these documents prior to the interview – every job will have one included within the advert.

- Qualifications required for the position may also be requested at the interview so ensure you have original copies available, as well as any documents required for pre-employment checks, for example Right to Work checks and DBS checks, if applicable to the role (this will be stated in your interview invite letter).
- Candidates should receive feedback at every stage from the manager and communication throughout the process. Feedback should be given to candidates within 5 days of their interview.
- The process will be formal however panel members are trained to get the best from candidates, each panel member will ask questions and make notes to score your answers accordingly.

6.0 Top tips for candidates

Practice and prepare	Your answers to interview questions should emphasise the skills that are most important to the employer and relevant to the position. Be sure to review the job details, make a list of the requirements, and match them to your experience. Prepare some examples of answers to scenarios using the 'STAR' interview response technique – S – set the scene by sharing the context around the Situation or challenge you faced. Try to use a work example, although you could refer to others where you may have transferable skills to highlight. T – Describe the Task – this is your role/responsibility in the situation described above. Action – how did you respond to the challenge, what did you do? If you refer to the team response, make sure you explain what you did. Result – Talk about two/three results that were achieved, pick the most impressive.
Get ready ahead of time	Decide on your outfit the night before, re-read the job description and person specification and have questions, a pad and paper ready.
Be on time	This means be early, arrive 5-10 minutes prior to the interview time allocated. If need be, visit the interview location ahead of time so you know exactly where you are going and how long it will take to get there. Consider the time of your interview so you can adjust for local traffic patterns at that time. Give yourself a few extra minutes to visit the restroom, check your outfit, and calm your nerves.
Try to stay calm	During the job interview, try to relax and stay as calm as possible. Remember that your body language says as much about you as your answers to the questions.

	<ol style="list-style-type: none">1. As you answer questions, maintain eye contact with the interviewer.2. Avoid cutting off the interviewer at all costs, especially when he or she is asking questions.3. If you need to take a moment to think about your answer, that's totally fine, and is a better option than starting out with multiple "ums" or "uhs."4. Pay attention to the question so that you don't forget it, and listen to the entire question before you answer, so you know exactly what the interviewer is asking. You could have a note pad nearby to write down key words to help you remember and refer to when responding to the question. Don't be afraid to ask the interviewer to repeat the question.5. Have a list of your own questions ready to ask the panel. In almost every interview, you'll be asked if you have any questions for the interviewer. It is important to have at least one or two questions prepared in order to demonstrate your interest in the organisation.

7.0 Virtual interviews

Virtual or video interviews have been utilised widely recently and have become the normal approach by many organisations, during these unprecedented times. They can save time and expense for both you and the employer and can be a great substitute for face to face interviews.

To help you adapt to these changing times and if you are asked to undertake a virtual interview, we have put together some tips which may help you perform your best on the day, any queries do not hesitate to contact the recruiting manager. We are utilising Microsoft Teams and a guide to how to use this is included at the end of the guide.

- Background and environment

Try and set yourself up in a quiet, tidy and well-lit room. Have your laptop or device at eye level and test this prior to the interview. It can be easily adjusted using books to achieve the correct height for you. Also try to have a major light source in front of you so it lights your face.

If at home, try to minimise distractions by informing the household you have an interview and require no interruptions. Pets and doorbells can be a distraction. Also try and limit other household use of the internet during your interview time so as you get a great connection.

- Be prepared
Ensure your laptop or device is fully charged and other applications have been closed that are not required and may be running in the background. Inform other family members and friends of the interview so they do not call you during this time. Also download the TEAMS application ahead of the interview and ensure it works, check your microphone is on and your camera is connected and operational.
- Dress appropriately
Whilst it is generally accepted that more casual dress is worn when working from home, you may wish to consider this when making your first impression and if your attire would be worn at a face to face interview
- Practice
Practice makes perfect! Take time to practice with the technology, practice talking into the camera to ensure you are comfortable and ready to impress the panel. Try to look at the camera rather than the screen as this will achieve great eye contact during the video interview. The recruiting manager may suggest a test before hand to ensure everything works correctly, if not and you would prefer to check on this, please do not hesitate to suggest this to the manager.
- What's the difference?
There is little difference between a virtual and face to face interview once you are comfortable and confident with the technology. Just be yourself and answer the questions to the best of your ability in line with the job description and person specification, sharing the skills and experience that you have that makes you the best candidate for the job.

We will of course make any adjustments to how we interview or offer more time for you if you have a disability, or pre-disclosed disadvantaged position such as (access to technology/ internet/ experience of virtual platforms).
